If split mode is enabled, then the whole table "height" is drawn, which might lead to such cases.

You could try to disable the split mode:

$oTable->setSplitMode(false);

Please specify which add-on you're using, which version and if you could send me a working sample to reproduce this?

Disabling split mode did the trick, the issue is now resolved. thanx!

Still, it can be seen as a bug.
When you disable the split-mode, the cells are NOT Splitted on a page-break. Eg: you have a 4 line cell, it will not be splitted.

Can you send me an "example" to reproduce this case? I could try to optimize it.

- File schedule.php added

I have attached a PHP file that reproduces the issue

Hi Andrei, any feedback with progress on the above issue?

#9 - 02/07/2014 11:00 AM - Andrei Bintintan

Yes, I can confirm that is a bug, but haven't got time to fix it properly.

In your case the setSplitMode will solve the problem, but I also want to fix this issue.
